

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A watering jug for plants having a valve with a pin sized hole for delivering trickling water. The container may have legs or support feet for orienting the watering jug in an upright position above the soil, and may be sized to provide a gentle slope to the container to assist the flow of water. A valve with a simple twist type mechanism for opening and closing is provided at the bottom of the jug. The watering jug is lightweight and portable.